

ONE DAY A WEEK

made to measure learning ages 5 to 16

Yoga, meditation and democratic choice

Students self-direct their way through our unique educational programme that integrates the mind and body. Daily yoga and meditation enhance their capacity for learning and self-management. In our democratic meetings, students learn to find their voice and make decisions collectively.

Science

Students choose their own topics with guidance from the teacher on the requirements of each of the separate sciences. Investigative work is carried out where possible to teach scientific skills and understanding.

Teacher Liva Hansen has an excellent track record with Science GCSE.

History

We take a Socratic approach which is led by the students' curiosity and questioning. Students chose what they want to study individually or as a group. The emphasis is on nurturing a love of learning history. Research homeworks and written assignments are offered.

Creative writing

We think it's far more interesting to learn about grammar, punctuation and spelling through writing your own stories. Learning language creatively is a wonderful way to develop skills and to build up confidence as writers and speakers.

Art

Art Teacher Greg Johnson forms part of a new and exciting way of acquiring knowledge where students are able to choose and direct their own learning paths as individuals. The amazing local landscapes are an inspiration for self-directed projects and with the small class numbers and expert support, pupils are free to explore and express themselves as artists.
